With Art Chicago on the horizon, we took five local works bound for the fair and sought out household objects to match. The result: a room in a neglected warehouse goes from dismal to daring.

STYLED BY BARRI LEINER :: TEXT BY CASSIE WALKER

In his latest sculptures, Chicago artist Richard Rezac (b. 1952) masters the contrast: the pairing of cool, clean materials such as aluminum with warm, painted woods and plaster.

➤ Untitled (07-02), $18,000, at Rhona Hoffman

↑ Eames walnut stools "A" and "C," $799 each, and ↓ Philippe Starck "Prince Aha" stool, $110, all at Design Within Reach

← Vinyl transfers by Domestic, $89 each, at the Museum of Contemporary Art

Photographer Lina Bertucci (b. 1958), who divides her time between New York and Chicago, uses external context to say something about how her subjects feel inside.

↓ Jennifer Lee, $6,000, at Rhona Hoffman

Oak Park painter Scott Stack (b. 1954) subtly alters the familiar—in this case, he renders an apartment building line-by-line, as if it is under surveillance or pictured on an old TV screen.

↓ Miami Apartment, $10,500, at Moniquemeloche

↑ Flor carpet tiles in Fedora chartrouse, Toy Poodle lime, and Green Acres, $6.95 to $13.95, at CB2

↑ Chris Benz—“Olivia” chiffon dress, $1,195, at Jake

↘ Malibu table, $575, at Shabby Chic → Finn gray pottery salad plates, $20 each; vintage Turkish tin-washed-copper pitcher, $48; turquoise mini vase, $22; Rococo noir teapot, $52; all at Jayson Home & Garden

Power radiates in even the fewest brush strokes by abstract expressionist Ed Clark (b. 1926), who trained at the Art Institute in the late 1940s.

↑ New York Series, $45,000, at G. R. N'Namdi

Where others see order, University of Chicago prof Laura Letinsky (b. 1962) finds entropy: the slow slide toward chaos that occurs, for example, when food is left on a table to rot.

→ No. 82, from her Hardly More Than Ever series, $3,500, at Moniquemeloche
